Obscure, unknown, Eminent Grand Commander; one of the highest positions in the most ancient and honorable order in the world; a title of which kings and princes have been proud and which is only bestowed on sterling worth, which money cannot buy, nor the fitful favor of the populace give. The Hon, Joseph H. Fussell is not such an obscure individual as the Readjusters try to make him appear, he is an honest, earnest, high-toned Christian gentleman who owes his present position to his indomitable energy and strict integrity, and a just appreciation of these qualities by the community in which he resides. By his own efforts and moral worth, unaided by wealth or influential friends, he has risen to the first place at the bar in a Circuit composed of three of the wealthiest and most intelligent counties in the State, and is the peer of any man he may meet.
